FASHION'S NAUGHTY MOMENT

OUT OF SIGHT

Now you DON'T see me!
The most pap-proof places on the planet,
by Francisca Kellett

Sometimes you want to get in the papers. Sometimes you want nothing more than a long lens to catch you cavorting on a Barbados beach or leaping off a yacht on Pampelonne (and if something pops out mid-leap, so much the better). If you've got a new fashion line to promote, say, or you're really keen to let your ex see exactly how over him you are. Or even if you just want to show off a perky new bosom. We get it. We're not judging.

But sometimes you really, really don't. If that new fashion line has bombed, or you'd much rather your husband DIDN'T see who you're snogging on a beach. Or even if that boob job has gone a bit, well, wonky. Again, not judging.

We all know where you should go to get spotted – a certain sandy place in Barbados, maybe, or perhaps a hotel that caps the rest on the Côte d'Azur. If you're properly organised, you can even prearrange a staged photo op with a gossip glossy; the published photos will look delightfully lascivious, but in reality they'll be nothing of the sort. You'll have pre-approval, so it's win-win, really.

But what about those places where it's impossible to get papped? Much harder to come by, so we've trotted round the globe picking out the private islands, the fly-free zones, the high-walled, deliciously discreet hideaways where you can pop out of your bikini as much – or as little – as you want.

GANG BLANK

It's all about attitude. We know a very high-profile family who get on and off their superyacht by pretending to be staff. Look like you're expecting to be recognised and chances are that you will be.

UMAID BHAWAN PALACE

Jodhpur, India

One of the world's largest private residences, this hilltop Rajasthani palace can only be accessed through one gate. The Royal Family and the usual Hollywood lot are fans. Greaves Travel (greavesindia.co.uk; 020 7487 9111) offers six nights from £2,399 a person, including flights.

DUNTON HOT SPRINGS Colorado
